

Work and Wages in Johnson County

Work should offer a pathway out of poverty by providing an income that is sufficient to sustain a household, meet financial obligations, and save for short-term emergencies and long-term goals. Local data tell us that most of the working-age poor are doing just that – working. However, they do not work enough hours or earn high enough wages to rise above the poverty level. Often the jobs these workers hold pay low wages, offer only part-time or temporary work, may have unpredictable schedules and likely do not offer paid benefits such as sick leave. Nor do they offer an opportunity for advancement. As a result, the poor are working hard but not getting ahead.

The Working Poor in Johnson County

Nearly 1 in 6 poor adults worked full time, year-round in 2014, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. And yet, even with full-time wages, their income fell below the federal poverty level. More than 6 in 10 worked part-time or part-year. Only 24% did not work.

The majority of the poor work

Adults 18-64 below the poverty level and without a disability that prevents work = 18,980
Source: U.S. Census Bureau, American Community Survey 1-year estimate, 2014

When Work Doesn't Pay

According to data on wages paid by Johnson County employers, 1 in 9 jobs pay less than $10 an hour. Another 22% pay between $10 and $15 an hour. Together one-third of jobs in Johnson County pay less than $15 an hour, which is equivalent to $31,200 for full-time year-round work.

1 in 9 jobs pay less than $10 an hour Johnson County average hourly wages

Annual wages for full-time, year-round work
$10	= $20,800
$15	= $31,200
$20	= $41,600
$30	= $62,400

2015 Jobs = 368,200
Source: Mid-America Regional Council. EMSI 3Q 2015

Employment projections for the area suggest that the largest employment growth through 2022 will be predominantly low-wage occupations, such as sales clerk, restaurant worker, cashier, and personal care aide. Supporting a family and getting a secure foothold in life is challenging when job opportunities are concentrated in low-wage jobs.

2016 Poverty Thresholds

- 1 person $11,880
- 2 persons $16,020
- 3 persons $20,160
- 4 persons $24,300

March 2016